AUDITIONS SCHEDULED

Auditions for Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will be held at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the junior college.

Paul Looney, director of the production and Shelton faculty instructor, said seven roles will be cast for youths 16 years old and older. Those planning to audition must bring a prepared piece of music with them.

Performances of the play are scheduled December 11 and 12 in the Bama Theater. The play is being sponsored by the Punch and Judy Players in cooperation with Shelton State Community College.

INTERESTED IN SETTING BACK THE HANDS OF TIME FOR A LITTLE WHILE? Then you need to circle your calendar for Wednesday, November 17, at 11 a.m. The Shelton music department will present a chamber music group consisting of early instruments. This is a very special show and one you will not want to miss.

Shelton faculty member David Cantrell will perform by voice and recorder. For those of you who heard David last year I know will want a repeat performance. Other scheduled performers are Susan Goode, recorder, and David Miller, harpsichord. The program will feature a variety of music from different periods.

THE SHELTON STATE BUS WILL NOT RUN ON WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 24. BE SURE TO MAKE YOUR PLANS ACCORDINGLY.

EARLY REGISTRATION WILL CONTINUE TODAY AND TOMORROW (NOVEMBER 15 and 16). THIS WILL BE THE LAST ISSUE OF THE MONDAY REPORT THIS QUARTER. REGISTRATION IS SCHEDULED FOR WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 1. CLASSES FOR WINTER QUARTER BEGIN ON THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2.

The Student Life Committee will meet this Wednesday, November 17, at 12:15 in Dean Lee's office.

EDITORIAL

EXIT SIGNS ARE NICE

Where else but Shelton State? Where else would the faculty, staff and students rally around the college as they did for Dr. Gundy's recent visit to Shelton State. High school syndrome? Maybe. Corny? Perhaps. To me it was a wonderful thing to watch. I'll always remember the faculty members' cookies, the Jolly's punch, Bruce's photography, the Shelton Singers, the Jazz Ensemble, the alumni association workers, the hostesses, etc., etc. And of course, no "thank you" would be complete without mentioning the Shelton magicians, the maintenance crew. They can literally change the face of the auditorium in six minutes.

These are the type of things that makes Shelton State special. I have an exit sign hanging in my office, a left-over from the Gaylords department store days. Sometimes when you start thinking a little too much of yourself, it's very humbling to look up and see "exit" hanging over your typewriter. It's very hard to take yourself too seriously with an exit sign over your desk.

Someday in the not-too-distant future, we will have a nice building. The potential at Shelton State is tremendous. This school may truly be the place to be during the next decade. However, I hope we will never lose this "togetherness" we now have.

Exit signs are kind of special.

NEWS FROM THE LIBRARY

An exhibit by Sara Nabors Turner is currently on exhibit in the Shelton State library. The exhibit will be open to the public Monday - Thursday, 8 a.m. - 10 p.m., and on Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Ms. Turner was born in Phoenix, Arizona but spent most of her early childhood in West Blocton. She graduated from Huntington College in 1943 and attended the University of Alabama where she earned a Master's degree in counseling and guidance, a Master's degree in Distributive Education, and an AA degree in educational psychology. She taught distributive education at Tuscaloosa and Holt high schools.

Upon her retirement in 1980, she and her husband, Britt, have lived in Destin, Florida where she has painted and studied with Don Crossley, Judy Maines, and Jenny "Musako" Gartman. She has participated in art shows in both Alabama and Florida and recently won a Merit Award for her art work at the McFarland Arts and Crafts show.

A BRIEF EXHIBIT OF CHILDREN'S ART from the child development center is planned for November 29 - December 3, in the junior college library, Monday Friday, 8 a.m. - 4 p.m.

FROM THE FIRE COLLEGE

The 23rd Fire and Arson Investigation Conference will be held on November 15 - 18. Final registration begins at 9 a.m. The fee for the conference is $20 per person. For more information, contact Alabama Fire College.

Greensboro, Ala. is trying for a reduction in the cities fire classification as they are currently classified as Class 6. As a part of this effort, the city has recently built a drill facility for the fire department. The Greensboro Department has approximately 30 members. The new drill facility has provisions for air mask practice in heavy smoke, extinguishing running oil fires, extinguishing oil pit fires and drafting operations from a below grade pit. In addition, there is a three-story drill tower which was constructed from creosated poles and lumber.

This is a functional training area which can be built at reasonable cost. Let's wish them success.

If anyone is not familiar with the location of the Alabama Fire College, the building is located on McFarland Blvd., in front of Albertson's grocery.
